WIN A DALEK

Just five days after the Win-a-Dalek competition was announced, the entries began to pour in – over 7,000 by the closing date. Terry Nation, the Dalek's creator, had the strenuous task of choosing the winners; here, Madeleine Kingsley talks to him and the successful entrants about their efforts

Meet the Dalek winners!

Terry Nation is usually quite at home among the Daleks. He certainly should be, for he's the man who first invented them in 1963. But even Terry was a little overwhelmed when he came up to London to judge the Win-a-Dalek competition which RADIO TIMES announced in January.

'It's just like Christmas,' he exclaimed when he walked into the RADIO TIMES offices and saw sack upon sack full of packages lining the walls.

It was impossible to be harsh and disqualify late-comers – Terry felt each one of them must be given a chance. But, of course, that meant an enormous amount of work for him, picking the winners from over 7,000 entries from four to 83-year-olds, including one sent all the way from Australia, and several from people who were blind or disabled.

Most of the material was sent by children between the ages of eight and 17. 'I'm particularly sorry,' said Terry, 'that I can't write individually to all the people that wrote to me during the competition, or even return entries to people, but there were just too many.' What particularly interested him were the entries which weren't just confined to paints and paper, but included models or montages of paper and materials. In the under-ten category he was very excited by some of the fantasy monsters the children had drawn. Consequently he was delighted when ever he came upon a really unearthly monster – such as the jelitron, the cuba, the terrabrontos, and the dreaded wurly witsa. Some of these will be on display, with the winners, at a special exhibition (see details below right).

When he read the stories, Terry was looking for ingenuity: 'I was always happy when someone "cheated" to alter the whole concept of the story we'd begun, for instance by putting the Tardis into a time warp.'

Among the children of 10 years and over, Terry decided that presentation of the entries must count for a great deal, but finally made up his mind to choose Peter Klosin, of Brixham, Devon, because his art work was 'more than just a sheet of paper with a drawing on it. His landscape of Destron and his battle scene became a real place and situation.'

Peter is 15 and at school preparing for his O-levels (art of course included). 'I'm very keen on science fiction,' he said, 'and am always drawing and painting in my spare time, so the competition combined my two interests.'

The pupils of Form 1M, at Balgowan Primary School, Beckenham, Kent, were outright winners in the under-10 section.

'When a telegram arrived for them this morning,' said their headmaster Laurence Davies, 'it took all my restraint not to open it myself. I held it up to the children in assembly, and asked if anyone could tell me what it was. But you see, none of them had ever seen a telegram before. Eventually we agreed it could bring good news – and when I read it aloud to them they were all thrilled.'

Their form teacher Mrs Ruth Marchant, helped children to collect paper and scraps of fabric to include, and they went to work on their entries in small groups.

'Mrs Marchant liked them so much, she really didn't want to send them away,' said seven-year-old Suzanne. But Mrs Marchant obviously managed to overcome her hesitation nobly. When the Post Office refused to accept her enormous parcel, she decided to bring it up to town herself, by hand.

My Choice

Katy Manning

I JUST dig TV. I'm part of the generation that was brought up on television and I simply love watching things move.

● I like the way they experiment with photography on The Old Grey Whistle Test (Tuesday BBC2). There's really very little visual experiment on television. I thought there would be more when colour came but there hasn't been. Those bits of weird abstract film that they sometimes use in the programme tie up well with music. I think there's a pretty big audience that wants more than Top of the Pops and this is the only programme that caters for them.

● I always watch Tom and Jerry on Wednesday and Boss Cat on Thursday (BBC1). I think there should be 40 minutes a week at least devoted to cartoons. I don't know anybody of any age group that doesn't love them and they take to television so well. I was up at seven in the morning in America watching cartoons. Maybe they'll do more in this country when we get longer television time. I hope so.

● I think the Treasures of Tutankhamun (Tuesday BBC2) will be fascinating. I like programmes about buried treasure. I've read a bit about Tutankhamun and the programme shouldn't be too heavy. If you're stupid like me and love cartoons then education has to be very subtly done.

● That's why Horizon is so good (Monday BBC2). They can make the most complex subject understandable. I feel frightfully educated and knowledgeable after watching.
